Revision can either be:

a. i. minor corrections to the satisfaction of the Head of Department
   ii. substantial amendments to the satisfaction of the Head of Department OR
b. i. substantial amendments and re-examination by the examiner/s
   ii. major revision extension / elaboration and re-examination by the examiner/s

Periods permitted for revision:

i. minor corrections to the satisfaction of the Head of Department
ii. substantial amendments to the satisfaction of the Head of Department
For both above-mentioned outcomes, the recommended period for revision, is three months and the maximum period permitted, 6 months. Candidates unable to meet this deadline must formally apply to the PG Committee for an extension of this period. An extension can only be granted once, and is a period of six months – extensions will also be granted in exceptional circumstances only. The extension also has a fee linked to it. Should a candidate not submit within the maximum period of six months and not apply for an extension, a FAIL result will be coded for the thesis, dissertation or research report. Similarly, should a candidate who had been granted an extension not submit within the six-month period, a FAIL will be coded as above for the thesis, dissertation or research report.

i. substantial amendments and re-examination by the examiner/s
ii. major revision extension / elaboration and re-examination by the examiner/s
For both the above-mentioned outcomes, the recommended period permitted for revision is six months; however, either the Chair of the PG Committee or an Ad Hoc Committee will make a recommendation on whether an extension should be granted. The extensions as reflected for the above-mentioned outcomes, will be six and additional months. Since candidates who have been recommended to submit for re-examination, are liable for a re-examination fee, the extension fee will be waived. Candidates unable to submit within the extended period may motivate for a further extension of an additional six months, but his will be a the normal full fee rate and will only be granted in exceptional circumstances. Candidates still not submitting after this additional extension period will be coded with a FAIL result for the thesis, dissertation or research report.

Please note that you should allow 6 to 8 months for this process when planning your submission for graduation – Graduation ceremonies take place in July and December of each academic year.
