Terms and conditions of use

The license agreements governing the electronic resources available through the University of the Witwatersrand Library permit the content to be used for scholarly, non-commercial purposes only, by authorized staff and students of the University. The systematic downloading, distribution, printing or retention of substantial portions of content, such as entire journal issues, or the transmitting of online content to mailing lists, is strictly prohibited. Users are advised that any breaches of the University's contractual agreements with publishers could result in the suspension of access to the resource for the entire University community.

Remote Access to the electronic resources is available to currently registered staff and students of the University. Off-campus users should note that they will be prompted for their staff or student number and PIN. For additional assistance, ask a librarian.

 To find individual electronic publications by title, or to browse publications by discipline, use the e-Publication Portal.

South Africa's travel and tourism industry is struggling to grow the number of foreign visitors to our shores, and now the coronavirus is weakening hold on international travel. Although local stocks exposed to the sector are cheaply valued, the current local and global environment weighs heavily on the outlook for companies operating in this space.
